The WoCaT

This Guide wants to give you an Overview of all existing colors and textures that are available atm.

It will show you for each texture:

- the name
- how it looks
- how an item looks when this texture will be applied to it
- the tt value
- the level in material designer needed to apply it
- the level in material manufacturer needed to craft it
- the materials needed to craft it

It will show you for each paint:

- the name
- how it looks
- how an item colored with it looks like
- the tt value of each can
- the colorer level needed to paint with it
- which mobs loot this paint

By this guide want to give you the opportunity to find out which color/texture you like and how to get it.

Happy customization!

Coloring and Texturizing

About (C)

All Items within Entropia that have a (C) in their names may be customized. Customize means you can color and texturize them.

Most Items have three customization fields, those fields are predefined per item, they can not be changed or influenced. The pattern of the items is fixed on the item, so flame pattern pants for example will always have those flames while striped pants always have the thin lines. to see many examples of those fields you might have a look at my website leeloo.cwsurf.de/fields.html

if you decide to color your item, you have to put all desired colors on all fields at the same time. It is not possible to add another one later. If you decide to put texture on your item you have to put all desired textures on all fields on at the same time, it is not possible to add more textures later.

Colors and textures however do not interfere, those can be changed individually from each other. they do mix on the appearance of your item, which can have some very interesting effects.

Color your world today!

Bleaching

Ripping the customization of your item Bleaching always removes all colors or all textures from your item. Textures and Paints can be bleached separately, so if you remove the textures, the colors stay on the item, if you bleach the colors the textures stay untouched. But it is not possible to bleach separate fields. This means to remove one color or one texture but keep the rest is not possible.

It is not possible if you have an item that is not fully colored to add another color. First it has to be bleached.

Same goes for textures, if your item already got one field texturized, it would need to be bleached to get new textures on, we cannot add more textures to existing ones.

If you have an item which has one field colored, but you want to have a second field colored the only way to do it is as follows: bleach the item (remove old color) and add the old color plus the new color. Same goes for textures, if you want to add another texture to an existing one you have to retexture the already textured field too.

Thank You!

Gratuities

A woman with her back to the camera, wearing a blue bikini, is pouring a thick, blue liquid from a bucket she is holding above her head. The liquid is dripping down her back and legs. The background is dark.
